A Sunday paper which may as well be nameless has a long story about the thrilling experience of a young woman ten or twelve years of age. She goes to a rodeo armed with a "rifle" a "dangerous looking belt full of 22-caliber short cartridges". During the affair her lover is thrown to the ground senseless, with a broken arm, and the herd of ferocious wild steers makes a charge on the figure lying on the ground. The brave tenderfootless draws her trusty "weepon," kneels on one knee, well, just kneels, and then "ping, ping, ping," go the bullets and to the touch of each 22-caliber short pellet a great big steer drops to the ground, dead. All of which is very romantic. But we would like to see the color of the steers that would pay any more attention to a 22-caliber bullet than it would to the bite of a goat—indeed, half so much. We have had some experience in that line and know that it takes a 45-caliber cartridge, good and long, and aimed at exactly the right spot, to bring such an animal down. And sometimes it takes several of them. Which reminds us of the old story about the tenderfoot and the 22-caliber "gun." He arrived in a mining camp with such a toy slung to his belt. A grizzled old miner looked at it with curiosity and finally asked permission to examine it. He turned it over in the palm of his hand, where by the way it was almost lost, and after looking at it critically asked the owner: "And what might that be?" "That—why, that's a pistol!" "Say young fellow," said the miner in a hoarse whisper, "do you know what I would do if you was to shoot me with that air contraption and I was to find it out once, I would boot you clean out of this camp." By the way, on reading to the end of the article about killing steers with a 22 gun, we find that it was written by a "Miss Bird." Truly, an appropriate signature!

Every once in a while some one threatens the editor that if he says so and so, he will stop his paper. And occasionally something that is in the paper that is not agreed to by the reader brings a command to "stop my paper." The Dunkirk (Ind.) Star touches on this matter very properly: "A man who stops his paper because there is something in it he does not like, should be consistent, and get up and leave the hotel table if he finds something on the bill of fare that does not suit his taste. He would be just as consistent in one act as the other. A good newspaper is a bill of mental food for as many states as possible, and the reader ought to know that the article that does not suit him is just what nearly every reader of the paper wants. The man who insists on having his paper to his individual taste, should buy the material, edit and print one for himself and ask no one else to read it."

Against a pain from bruise or sprain Trib's the best insuring. You will regret if you forget Trib when you go touring.

TRIB IN THE HIGH SIERRAS.

The day we started on our trip across the mountains, from Carson, Nevada, while wheeling down the grade to the old Lake Tahoe, I went over a high cobblestone, falling and badly spraining and bruising my left knee, when we reached Hobart, the instep of Mrs. Gordon's right foot was also much weakened by the severe exertion necessary on the mountain road. It seemed as if we could go no further. There was just one bottle of the liniment, Trib, in the place. We brought it and applied it thoroughly that night and the next morning, and were thus enabled to proceed easily and without delay. Continuing its use, in three days we reached our destination, both knee and instep completely cured and free from that muscular stiffness and soreness which too often mars an outing. Trib is the greatest thing on earth where a liniment is needed.

P. H. GORDON

I will also add a word if you please. Without Trib, all the pleasure of a most interesting journey would have been destroyed, if, indeed, we could have made it at all.

MRS. P. H. GORDON

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon are now residing at Overton, California.

The ease with which signatures to a petition can be obtained, and the utter carelessness of many men as to documents to which they append their signatures, has just had a marked exemplification in Riverside. A petition was circulated at that place asking the Board of supervisors to reconsider their determination to build an expensive jail. While this document was being signed some joker drew up another one asking the Honorable Board of Supervisors to purchase $1,000,000 worth of ham and eggs for the detention of the occupants of the city jail. This remarkable petition was actually signed in good faith by nearly a hundred taxpayers before anyone took the pains to read what it was all about.

The government postal department will not allow a newspaper containing a lottery advertisement to pass through the mails, but for the past week the interior department has been running a gigantic lottery at El Reno, Oklahoma Territory. The prizes are land patents to 160 acres each, the best place being considered worth $40,000, being a townsite. It looks strange to see a big government conducting a lottery and at the same time prohibiting others. —Ex.

According to the Carson News, Judge Talbot will probably be the fusion candidate for Supreme Judge, to succeed Judge Massey, whom, it is said, prefers to retire into private life after his term upon the supreme bench expires.

A new man who came to town lately says he doesn't amount to anything. This is a good sign; he is probably a very bright and competent man.
